JULIA TELFORD

Julia built and runs her own business, Engage & Create Consulting from Goondiwindi. The focus of Engage & Create Consulting is to support the viability and vibrancy of businesses and community organisations across regional Australia. She works with regional communities across the country on a range of projects, with the focus on identifying needs in business, and actions to address this need. Julia was listed as one of the 100 Women in Australian Agribusiness in 2014, and was a finalist in the community contribution category. She is President of Care Goondiwindi and a board member on Regional Development Australia for Darling Downs South West Queensland.

CLAIRE DUNNE

Sometimes you can take a break in the bush, to find your life's direction, only to discover you've been on track all along. This has been the story for 23 year old, Central Queensland storyteller and magazine publisher Claire Dunne. Four years ago she deferred her university studies to return home to her family cattle property. She needed a break, some bush solitude and planned to take six months to decide on a new direction. Six months became four years with the realisation that she loved working with her family in their beef business. But it was her love of writing and a strong entrepreneurial streak that saw this young woman launch her own magazine, Graziher.

The publication features stories about inspiring and interesting women: innovators, experimenters, think-outside-the square sorts, successful business and everyday rural women.
